Non-alcoholic fatty liver disease (NAFLD) encompasses a spectrum of liver disorders characterized by triglyceride accumulation in the absence of significant alcohol intake. NAFLD is now the most common liver disease in the Western world and is associated with many metabolic and cardiovascular disorders, including insulin resistance and type 2 diabetes. In this review, we discuss the pathogenesis and epidemiology of NAFLD, the diagnostic modalities for detection of liver damage and describe potential therapeutic interventions. The mechanisms underlying the pathogenesis of NAFLD are reviewed. This includes defective fat metabolism (synthesis, transport and oxidation), altered hepatic lipoprotein metabolism and dysfunctional immunity. Insulin resistance and oxidative stress are now recognized as contributing factors in the development of NAFLD. This review will focus on the diagnosis of NAFLD and the role of insulin resistance and oxidative stress in the development of NAFLD. We will describe the evolution and future direction of research in NAFLD. When you are feeling down, make sure you are not feeling down because of your device.
