Director, James Benning, and producer/co-director, Kief Davidson, will join the panel discussion following the film. A reception with light refreshments and an opening remarks will follow the screening. Thoreau wrote Walden after returning from two years of living at Walden Pond in Concord, Massachusetts. His experiment in living in nature for two years was a true source of inspiration to many at the time, especially Harriet Beecher Stowe, who later wrote the publication that bears his name. The film draws on over 200 hours of exclusive film footage shot on site at Walden Pond, as well as interviews with scholars, writers, and artists including Robert Farrar Capon, Jenny Coleman, Alexia Donald, Ted Gowan, Rachel Hadas, Robert Olshan, Josh Latta, Maggie Matheson, and Ed Rosenthal. Join us for this rare and spectacular opportunity to see one of America's greatest writers and visionaries as he lived his life. One-step self-assembly of gold nanoparticles on polymer brushes with high loadings. A new method for fabricating polyelectrolyte brushes that can graft gold nanoparticles (AuNPs) on it has been presented. In this method, the AuNPs can assemble on the polyelectrolyte brushes in a single step through electrostatic interaction. The method is facile and allows a very high grafting density on the polyelectrolyte brushes. Moreover, compared with the traditional post-grafting method, the grafting density of AuNPs on the polyelectrolyte brushes could be more easily controlled by adjusting the number of deposited AuNPs. The grafting densities of AuNPs on poly(dimethylaminoethyl methacrylate) (PDMAEMA) brushes could be as high as 7.2×10^{12} per m^2 , and the loading amounts of AuNPs on poly(acrylic acid) (PAA) brushes and
